First there was the picture of a sandy glade in the middle of which burned a fire with branding-irons in it, and a spotted Calf tied to a tree, but no sign of life. Then, without warning, Bessie Belle threw up her head in that characteristic trick of hers, and simultaneously Sank saw a figure rise out of the grass at his left with rifle leveled. The Ranger remembered afterward the odd foreshortening of the weapon and the crooked twist of the face behind it. With the first jerk of his horse's head his own gun had leaped to his shoulder; he was not conscious of having willed it to do so, and even as he pressed the trigger he beheld a jet of smoke spurt from the muzzle aimed at him. With the kick of his carbine he felt Bessie Belle give way; it seemed to Sank that he shot while she was sinking. The next instant his feet, still in the stirrups, were on the ground and his horse lay between them, motionless. That nervous fling of her head...
