But this assumption again is only true in the case of the ideal column. If the average modulus of elasticity E for the bow AC is greater than the average modulus E_2 for the ends AF and CG, it will follow by the geometric theorem, that the area ABD will be to the area AFK as E is to E_2 , because the slope at A is common to both curves. But again, if the inequality of modulus takes place in the other direction, i.e. if the modulus in one flange of the strut is throughout greater than in the other flange, it will follow that the area ABD must be greater than the area AFK (or vice versa) by a constant quantity. In the latter case, the reduction of...
