Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Man Who Stole a Meeting-House: And Preaching for Selwyn On a recent journey to the Pennsylvania oil regions, I stopped one evening with a fellow-traveller at a village which had just been thrown into a turmoil of excitement by the exploits of a horse-thief. As we sat around the tavern hearth, after supper, we heard the particulars of the rogue s capture and escape fully discussed; then followed many another tale of theft and robbery, told amid curling puffs of tobacco-smoke; until, at the close of an exciting story, one of the natives turned to my travelling acquaintance, and, with a broad laugh, said, Kin ye beat that, stranger? Well, I don t know, - maybe I could if I should try. I never happened to fall in with any such tall horse-stealing as you tell of, but I knew a man who stole a meeting-house once. Stole a meetin -house! That goes a little beyant anything yit, remarked another of the honest villagers. Ye don t mean he stole it and carried it away? Stole it and carried it away, repeated my travelling companion, seriously, crossing his legs, and resting his arm on the back of his chair. And, more than all that, I helped him. How happened that? - for you don t look much like a thief, yourself. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
